Michigan Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus celebrates success of third annual dinner and shoot

LANSING – Inclement weather could not dampen the spirits at the Michigan Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus' third annual dinner and shoot Tuesday at the Capitol Area Sportsmen's League in Lansing, announced Sen. Michelle McManus, R-Lake Leelanau.

"We had a great event," said Sen. Michelle McManus, Senate Republican co-chair of the MLSC. "Despite the weather, we had strong turnout and even had a couple people who had never shot before try it for the first time."

The event featured trap and skeet shooting as well as indoor bow instruction and turkey target shooting with representatives of the Northwest Wild Turkey Federation. The event was an opportunity for both members and non-members to enjoy and learn more about outdoor sports and to let first-timers try their hand at a shotgun or bow.

"This event has grown each year," McManus said. "I'm looking forward to being involved in next year's event and seeing it become even larger."

The Michigan Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus is dedicated to promoting the traditional and historical rights of Michigan citizens to hunt, fish, and engage in other outdoor activities.
